'Do we have something to go back to?': Evacuee

► Town still not considered safe: Wildfire spokesperson ► Blaze not under control

Frustration mounted yesterday for thousands of evacuees trying to find out if they have homes to return to after a wildfire reduced a large part of their town to cinders.

"You don't know what you have back there anymore," said Patty Lewis, who was staying at an evacuation centre in Athabasca, southeast of the burned-out community of Slave Lake.

"You don't even know when you can go home. We were told we could go home in a couple of days. Now we've been told two weeks, so I don't know."

Resident Laurie Northeast added: "People want to know who lost their home and who didn't. Do we have something to go back to? Is there a reason to go back?"

Lewis, Northeast and about 7,000 other Slave Lake residents were ordered out of town Sunday night when forest fires — whipped up by 100 km/h winds — swooped in and set fire to homes, businesses and cars. The flames turned entire neighbourhoods into wastelands of burnt concrete, black grass and twisted metal.

Officials and police are not letting residents back into the town, 250 kilometres northwest of Edmonton, because the smoke is too heavy, chemicals hang in the air and there is no electricity, power or drinking water.

Slave Lake aftermath

- Residents who fled are staying with friends or family or at one of three evacuation centres as far south as Edmonton.
- Alberta Emergency Services said 95 per cent of the town's population has moved out, but some citizens have refused to leave.
- RCMP spokesman Tim Taniguchi said there have been three reports of property-crime-related offences.
- Alberta Premier Ed Stelmach paid tribute to firefighters from Slave Lake, some of whom continued battling the blaze Sunday even as their own homes were burning to the ground.
- The Edmonton Humane Society was called in to Slave Lake yesterday to look for any animals lost or injured during the firestorm.

Mayor Karina Pillay-Kinnee said while it may be a couple of weeks before residents can return, officials are trying to at least get word to people about which properties have been damaged or destroyed.

"It is a priority. I understand the frustration of residents," said Pillay-Kinnee. THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Jim Nelson and his three-year-old son, Dylan, from Slave Lake, take a break on the curb outside the evacuee centre in Athabasca's community Sportplex yesterday. An emergency official says there's no timeline as to when residents will be able to return to the northern Alberta town scorched by a forest fire.

Maps make river valley easy to enjoy

Pat Wishart walks four kilometres every Tuesday morning through the Edmonton River Valley as a member of the Wild Rose Ramblers.

The walking club has grown from eight members to 40 over the last 22 years.

"We're a group of older people, so we always like to know where the wash-rooms are," she said with a laugh.

Now, more than 160 kilometres of the river valley trails within the city limits can be more easily navigated, thanks to three new maps — separated into Edmonton East, Edmonton Centre and Edmonton West.

The maps include information such as trail grade, sections of trails cleared in winter, locations of nearest transit stations — and the location of washrooms open year-round.

"(These maps) allow you to walk into the river valley in safety and in knowledge," said Sol Rolingher, chair of the River Valley Alliance, which joined forces with the city and Alberta Health Services to develop the maps.

They can be found online at edmonton.ca/river-valleymaps or at city hall, city recreation facilities, libraries and public-health units.

Maps for trails from Devon to Fort Saskatchewan will be developed in the future.

City says no to gravel pit

► Council votes 7-6 to defeat proposal ► Nearly 60 people spoke for or against project over two-day public hearing ► Bylaw created last year prohibits resource extraction in river valley

It was close but city council decided against allowing a gravel mine in the river valley last night in a 7-6 vote.

"I think it's a combination of the environmental risk in relation to that specific area," said Ian Murray, of the North Saskatchewan River Valley Conservation Society. "And also there's a lot of pride in the decades of the river valley's development."

Kanata Metis Cultural Enterprises Ltd., who bought the 34-hectare site between 199 Street and the river in southwest Edmonton for $8 million in 2009, wanted to extract 1.7 million tonnes of gravel within three to five years.

"We'll have to go back and sit down with the community back home and come up with some different ideas in how we can utilize the land," said Archie

- Allowing the project would have meant making an exception to the city's municipal development plan.
- Couns. Kim Krushell, Don Iveson, Ben Henderson, Karen Leibovici, Dave Loken, Bryan Anderson and Linda Sloan voted against allowing the exemption to the bylaw, while Couns. Amarjeet Sohi, Tony Caterina, Jane Batty, Kerry Diotte, Ed Gibbons and Mayor Stephen Mandel voted for it.

Murray said the society wants to work to create a 500-hectare Big Island-Woodbend natural area.

"Qualico was deterred by opposition," he said of the similar 2007 proposal that was also defeated. "I quite like to think nobody will try to do this again."

► Residents living on the hill at 199 Street and Quadrant Avenue, just above the proposed gravel-pit site, have a sign posted in protest.

Device to curb noise to be tested in Calgary

An Edmonton-made device designed to curb excessive noise levels from vehicles may soon debut on Calgary streets.

Calgary will be the first city to test the device called a Noise Snare, pending council approval.

The idea for the product that captures a decibel level, audio recording and video image, came after inventor Mark Nesdoly's infant daughter was woken up by the noise from a passing motorcycle.

So far, Edmonton by-law officers have turned Nesdoly's product down.

"With law-enforcement devices, as I've learned the hard way, everyone is interested but no one wants to be the first," Nesdoly said.

Edmonton city Coun.

Noise bylaw

▶ Edmonton's current vehicle noise bylaw was implemented almost a year ago on June 9.

▶ From July 2010 to February 2011, when the bylaw was brought back up for review, 115 tickets were issued and 55 were being fought.

▶ A noise complaint can be filed by calling 311. The fine for excessive noise is $250.

Amarjeet Sohi says if there's the potential to monitor vehicle noise more effectively and efficiently, he thinks the device will eventually be welcomed.

The area engulfed in active Alberta wildfires is one-and-a-half times Edmonton's size, say Sustainable Resource Development officials.

That 100,000-hectare spread includes 23 fires burning out of control, among them two that burned a third of Slave Lake forced the evacuation of its 7,000 residents this week.

"We virtually have every single heavy-duty helicopter in Canada working on Alberta fires," said Rob Harris, wildfire information officer with SRD.

Colin Lloyd, who helms

the Alberta Emergency Management Agency, said he can't give a time frame for when Slave Lake residents will return home, or to what's left in the town.

Evacuees who make it to this city can access medical attention, food, clothing, toiletries, blankets and shelter at the Edmonton Expo Centre, which has the capacity to house 350.

Those registered were expected to hit 500 yesterday, though just 35 beds were slept in Monday, said Stephane Labonne, the city's Disaster Social Services spokesman.

He credits the vacancies to people having other lodging options, but encourages people to register

Helping Slave Lake

- ▶ The Edmonton Humane Society has six staffers, some who helped after Hurricane Katrina, in Slave Lake. Evacuees who want help finding a pet can call 780-491-3850.
- ▶ ATB Financial is deferring Slave Lake loans and mortgages for those displaced from the fire, regardless of whether their home was destroyed.

- ▶ The Red Cross (1-800-418-1111) and Salvation Army (1-800-SAL-ARMY) are taking cash to go toward the relief efforts for Slave Lake and its residents.
- ▶ More than a dozen Facebook sites to donate to Slave Lake residents have been created.

at reception so family members can locate them.

The Edmonton Humane Society is also putting up pets outside Hall D, so people don't need to be separated from furry family members.

To combat boredom, temporary residents of the Expo Centre can access an Internet café, TVs and game console, while street hockey and portable basketball courts are in the works.

Citizens are asked not to drop off donations at the Expo Centre, but give cash instead through the Red Cross or the Salvation Army.

Long-weekend campfires get snuffed out

While federal lands, some First Nations reserves and municipalities are exempt, the rest of the province is under a fire ban, effective immediately.

Wind and extreme wildfire risks are being cited for the ban, which prohibits wood, briquette and gas fires and carries a hefty a potential fine for violators.

Propane stoves are allowed for cooking. Municipalities are encouraged to also put in place their own fire bans, and Edmonton yesterday issued a partial one.

More assaults on aboriginal women: Study

A new study says the rate of violent incidents reported by aboriginal women was triple that of non-aboriginal women in 2009.

Statistics Canada says nearly 67,000, or 13 per cent of aboriginal women aged 15 or older, reported they had been the victim of violent crimes. Violent crimes include sexual assault, robbery and physical assault.

The agency says 223 of every 1,000 aboriginal women reported incidents of violence, while the rate among non-aboriginal women was 84 in 1,000.

Most violent incidents reported were committed by males acting alone.

Native women who reported violence by a current or former spouse was about two and a half times higher than the proportion of non-aboriginal women.

Winnipeg STI cases centred downtown

JAMES TURNER
NEWS@METRONews.CA

Just 17 per cent of Winnipeg's population lives there, but the downtown core accounts for 58 per cent of cases of gonorrhea and 38 per cent of cases of Chlamydia, recent data from the Winnipeg Regional Health Authority shows.

The core area includes the downtown and Point Douglas neighbourhoods.

"Chlamydia and gonorrhea are more core-area diseases than they are suburban diseases," said Dr. Pierre Plourde, a chief medical officer of health. "That holds for almost any communicable disease, whether you're talking HIV, tuberculosis."

Poverty is a major contributor to the high infection rates, Plourde said, adding Chlamydia migrates into the suburbs because a person can have it undetected for years. Gonorrhea spreads less frequently because the discomfort it causes results in people quickly going in for test and treatment. Both diseases are easily treated.

WRHA embarked last year on an awareness campaign urging people — especially those aged 18 to 25 — to pee in a cup and get tested for the two sexually transmitted infections (STIs). Another campaign is in the works.

The region has faced concern about STI outbreaks and quickly got them under control. Two separate outbreaks of syphilis between 2003-2008 were defeated by aggressive measures to counteract them, Plourde said.

Freebie trips for MPs gouge the public's purse

► Revenue used is from government ► Sponsored trips that cost more than $500 should be declared

Freebie trips for members of Parliament that are supposedly not on the public dime may be paid by taxpayers after all. Public records show some groups, which sponsored MP junkets, got millions of dollars in government funding.

MPs enjoy all-expense-paid trips and free travel courtesy of foreign governments, advocacy groups and business organizations. Some justify the junkets, saying it doesn't cost Canadians a thing since the sponsoring groups foot the bill. But two organizations, which paid for MP trips, received nearly $14 million from the government, according to the Canada Revenue Agency.

Critics claim free travel is a way to buy influence, MPs say it gives them a broader perspective on world issues.

Myanmar amnesty 'pathetic'

► Country has more than 60,000 prisoners in 42 prisons and 109 labour camps ► But authorities insist there are no political detainees

Myanmar is releasing more than 14,600 prisoners under a clemency program that includes just a few political prisoners. General Zaw Win, director of the prison department, said most of the inmates would be released yesterday.

Myanmar has been under the sway of the army since 1962, and critics say its recent transition to a civilian government is a charade. Authorities have long clamped down on dissent, and the United Nations estimates there are more than 2,000 political detainees nationwide.

The limited nature of the program — which commutes death sentences to life in prison and cuts one year from other inmates' terms — has drawn criticism from many who had expected more generous amnesties that have been announced in the past.

New York-based Human Rights Watch denounced the clemency program as "a pathetic response to international calls for the immediate release of all political prisoners."

The National League for Democracy — the de facto opposition party — said at least 22 political prisoners were among those freed.

Detainees who remain behind bars include student activists, such as Min Ko Naing, who are serving 65-year prison sentences, and politicians from ethnic minority parties, such as Shan leader Hkun Htun Oo, who have sentences of more than 80 years.

Of the 14,600 convicts released by Myanmar, 2,166 were women. Their numbers include Naw Ohn Hla, who used to go to Yangon's Shwedagon pagoda every Tuesday to pray for the release of pro-democracy leader Aung Sang Suu Kyi when she was under house arrest.

That was the case yesterday when Queen Elizabeth, 85, placed a wreath in Dublin to honour Irish rebels who lost their lives fighting for freedom — from Britain.

The Queen, resplendent in a cloak of emerald green, became the first British monarch to set foot in Dublin for a century.

Her four-day visit is designed to show that the bitter enmity of Ireland's war of independence 90 years ago has been replaced by friendship.

At least nine horses in Idaho, Utah, Colorado, California, Washington and Canada have been infected with contagious Equine Herpes Virus-1.

► Couple name new baby Like

An Israeli couple have named their newborn baby daughter Like — after the Facebook button used to express appreciation.

Lior and Vardit Adler from the town of Hod Hasharon, northeast of Tel Aviv, chose the name because they wanted something “modern and innovative.”

“In our opinion it's the modern equivalent of the name Ahava (Love). It's just my way of saying to my fantastic daughter, ‘Love,’” Lior Adler told Haaretz, an Israeli newspaper.

Lior Adler added: “To me, it is important to give my children names that are not used anywhere else, at least not in Israel.”

The top three girls' names in Israel are Noa, Maya and Tamar.

“We have two other daughters: The first one is named Dvash (honey in Hebrew). The second is called Pie, like a cake. All the names were my idea.”

Wind Mobile and feds appeal court ruling

► Mobile biz has almost 300,000 customers ► Claims it will have 1.5-million subscribers in three years ► Aims to be top Canadian competitor

Wind Mobile will be at the centre of a legal case today that questions how the federal cabinet intervened to allow the mobile phone carrier to operate in Canada, despite a CRTC ruling that decided it was foreign-owned.

"Obviously, we will fight in the courts as far as we can," Wind Mobile chairman Anthony Lacavera said of the case, which will be heard in the Federal Court of Appeal in Ottawa.

Wind Mobile and the federal government are appealing a decision that cabinet overstepped its authority when it let the Toronto telecom company go into business in December 2009 after the national regulator had already ruled it wasn't Canadian-owned.

Lacavera also said it could mean taking the case to the Supreme Court, or going back to the CRTC to satisfy ownership requirements if he loses the appeal case.

"At the end of the day, there's no scenario where Wind gets shut down," Lacavera said.

Wind Mobile says it's aiming to be Canada's fourth major wireless carrier after Rogers, Bell and Telus.

Back in October 2009, the CRTC said that Wind's parent company Globalive didn't meet Canadian ownership to operate as a carrier.

Lacavera maintains the February court decision ruled the government didn't follow the "correct legal procedure" when it issued the 2009 order-in-council that allowed Wind Mobile to go into business, and that his company is Canadian-owned.

NDP member Brian Masse said there needs to be a level playing field for new wireless players.

"The objective was to have new entrants enter the market in a fair way that would increase competition and lower prices for consumers," said Masse, who represents the Ontario riding of Windsor-West.

"Well that entire thing has been defeated by the way this government has handled the situation," Masse said.

Industry Minister Tony Clement said that it had to go back to the CRTC to satisfy ownership requirements.

"That way, Wind and its competitors that were entering the market could have felt more comfortable with the competitive process and we could have moved past the speculation of throwing industry progress to the court system."

Greece seeking debt delay

Greece's private creditors may be asked to give the struggling country more time to repay its debts, the European Union's top economic official said yesterday, marking an important shift in the region's attitudes towards solving the crisis.

Until this week, European officials had denied that extending debt repayments had even been discussed, for fear of undermining market confidence. But many investors are convinced a change in Greece's debt deals is inevitable at some point.

"A voluntary extension of loan maturities could ... be examined" together with asking banks and other investors to maintain their exposure to Greece, the EU's monetary affairs commissioner Olli Rehn told journalists after a two-day meeting with European finance ministers.

Before any such move is considered, however, Rehn said the Greek government was expected to announce in coming days new spending cuts and reforms to make sure it can lower its budget deficit to the targets set out in its bailout program.

At its current rate, Greece is expected to post a budget deficit of 9.5 per cent this year, more than three times the EU's limit and two percentage points above what it promised a year ago.

Netflix overtakes surfing online

► Popularity could pose risks to the profits of Canadian cable companies

Move over web surfing. Netflix movies now take up more of the Internet pipes going into North American homes.

A study published yesterday by Sandvine Inc. shows that Netflix movies and TV shows account for nearly 30 per cent of traffic into homes during peak evening hours, compared with less than 17 per cent for web browsing.

Only about one-quarter of homes with broadband subscribe to Netflix, but watching movies and TV shows online takes up a lot of bandwidth compared with web surfing, email and practically every other Internet activity except file sharing and videoconferencing.

As late as last year, both web surfing and peer-to-peer file sharing — mainly the illegal trading of copyrighted movies — were each larger than Netflix's traffic.

Sandvine makes equipment that helps cable and phone companies manage their Internet delivery systems. It collected data from unidentified customers for the survey. It has previously been linked to Comcast Corp., the largest Internet service provider in the U.S. Sandvine says its data should be representative of overall home Internet use.

The number of Netflix customers is growing quickly, to 23.6 million subscribers in the U.S. and Canada as of the end of March. The growing use of the streaming service is good news for the company, which is trying to reduce what it spends to mail DVDs. The rental video business in Canada totalled about $970 million in 2010, down 12 per cent from the previous year, says Toronto-based Convergence Consulting Group. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REAL ESTATE JUMP

Canada's housing prices rise

The national average home price rose by eight per cent last month even as housing sales fell by 14.7 per cent from the year before, according to data released yesterday.

Home prices jumped to $372,544 compared to last April — the third consecutive month in which the national average price rose by eight per cent from year-ago levels, the Canadian Real Estate Association said. Meanwhile, the number of previously occupied homes sold in April fell to 17,230 from 18,745 a year ago.

The national housing has been skewed recently due to a surge in sales of multimillion-dollar properties in the Greater Vancouver area.

Demand for those properties fell in April compared to March, but was offset by fewer sales of lower-priced properties. "Changes to mortgage regulations that took effect in April 2011 likely sidelined a number of first-time homebuyers," said Gregory Klump, CREA's chief economist.

Declines were largest in some of Canada's most expensive and active markets, including Toronto, Vancouver and British Columbia's Fraser Valley.

The group reportedly attacked police with machetes, rocks and hammers. The North Mara mine is in Tanzania, about 20 kilometres south of the Kenyan border.

An Israeli couple recently named their new baby girl Like, as in the like button on Facebook.

Like, is that not the dumbest thing you ever heard?

The same couple also named their other daughters Pie, as in lemon meringue, and Dvash, which is Hebrew for honey.

The parents, Lior and Vardit Adler, say they wanted a unique and modern name for their newborn and Like sounded "modern and innovative." Lior told an Israeli newspaper that Like is the modern equivalent of the name Ahova (Love).

No, it isn't. It's a button. On a piece of software. It's a ploy designed to create a digital pattern allowing Facebook to serve up ads that match your profile. It's about the money, Honey.

At least they didn't name their daughter Zuckerberg, after the founder of Facebook.

themselves? In their quest for 15 minutes of cheap fame, Lior and Vardit have condemned Like, Pie and Dvash to spend the rest of their lives spelling and explaining their names to strangers, getting teased mercilessly in the schoolyard by bullies with conventional names, trying to get their names legally changed or using their middle names (which are not, hopefully, Recommend, Edit or Write On Her Wall).

It's child abuse and it's hardly rare. It may seem cute at the time, but remember that the apple (Pie?) of your eye has to wear it for the rest of his or her life. Life is hard enough without being called Pie.

Same goes for the current crop of kids named after vampires, politicians and Lady Gaga.

Worth mentioning

LONDON. An Egyptian princess who lived more than 3,500 years ago is the oldest known person to have had clogged arteries, dispelling the myth heart disease is a product of modern society, a new study says.

To determine how common heart disease was in ancient Egypt, scientists performed computer scans on 52 mummies in Cairo and the United States. Among those that still had heart tissue, 44 had chunks of calcium stuck to their arteries — indicating clogging.

Adel Allam, a cardiology professor at Al Azhar University in Cairo, who led the study with Gregory Thomas, director of nuclear cardiology education at the University of California in Irvine, found the Egyptian princess Ahmose-Meryet-Amon, who lived in Thebes (now Luxor) between 1540 and 1550 BC, had calcium deposits in two main coronary arteries, making her the oldest mummy found with heart disease. The princess' father and brother were both pharaohs.

Other finalists include "Does not supply oxygen" on a dust mask and "Avoid drowning. Remove safety cover from spa when in use" on a hot tub cover. A more high-concept warning making the list is this label for a leather handgun holster designed to look like a personal digital assistant: "For gun only, not a functional day planner."

Another warning tells would-be bicycle riders, "The action depicted in this brochure is potentially dangerous. The riders seen are experts or professionals."

► Depp and Bruckheimer have hinted the Pirates franchise could go on indefinitely, like James Bond

PETER MOUNTAIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/DISNEY.

► Johnny Depp portrays Captain Jack Sparrow in a scene from Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides. Movie producer Jerry Bruckheimer has said of Depp: "He created the franchise, that character. Made it come alive. He is Pirates of the Caribbean."

Ahoy all over again: Jack sails fresh waters

New pirates, new ship, new treasure — same old Jack Sparrow.

After a trilogy that hauled in $2.7 billion worldwide, Pirates of the Caribbean relaunches with On Stranger Tides, a fresh start for the buccaneerblockbuster franchise starring the franchise's one indispensable ingredient — Johnny Depp as Capt. Jack.

With Jack's beloved ship, the Black Pearl, in a strange state of dry-dock, he and his mates sail in search of the fountain of youth aboard Blackbeard's terrifying vessel, the Queen Anne's Revenge.

Hollywood rarely messes with a good thing to this extent, but the filmmakers are banking that audiences will be anxious to follow in Jack's wake as he storms into uncharted seas.

Unlike the trilogy that grew out of 2003's blockbuster The Curse of the Black Pearl, the new Pirates installment is a stand-alone story, said producer Jerry Bruckheimer.

But even before On Stranger Tides hits theatres, Bruckheimer has a script for a fifth Pirates movie in the works. That sounds like a commander confident he's on the right course, even before leaving port. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEPP FOLLOWS A LONG LINE OF BUCCANEERS

IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides co-star Ian McShane suggests that Johnny Depp is "paid more than the national debt of most countries" to play the tipsy freebooter Captain Jack Sparrow.

Depp may be the highest paid movie pirate to ever sail the seven seas, but he's not the only celluloid sea dog.

Movie pirates were popular on the silent screen — they swashbuckled as early as 1908's Treasure Island — but it wasn't until Errol Flynn played the title role in 1935's Captain Blood that pirates became screen staples.

"No one can beat Errol Flynn," says Under the Black Flag: The Romance & Reality Of Life Among The Pirates author David Cordingly. "He has the edge over all the other movie pirates."

Coming close is Robert Newton as Long John Silver in Treasure Island. One of the best live action Disney films of the 1950s, it is the movie that originated the Cornish accent that has become the accepted pirate speak in dozens of movies to follow.

For a sample check out the voice of The Simpsons' Captain McAllister. It's based on Newton's pirate portrayal.

Less conventional is Walter Matthau's take on Captain Bartholomew Red in Roman Polanski's Pirates.

The planned followup to the director's massive hit Chinatown (it actually took 12 years to make it to the screen) was to have starred Jack Nicholson but, like the buccaneer he might have portrayed in the movie, the star was money hungry.

According to the director, when he asked Nicholson exactly how much he wanted, the actor simply said, "I want more."

His replacement, Matthau, redefines grizzly in his depiction of Captain Red, but the film didn't meet with good reviews.

"There hasn't been a pirate movie in a long time," wrote Roger Ebert, "and after Roman Polanski's Pirates, there may not be another one for a very long time."

What look at movie pirates would be complete without a mention of singing and dancing sea dogs?

There are lots of pirate musicals but one of the best, and most overlooked, is The Pirate starring Judy Garland and Gene Kelly.

With direction by Vincente Minnelli (father of Liza) and songs by Cole Porter, the story of a young girl in love with a man pretending to be a pirate earned an Oscar nomination for Original Music Score, but lost out to another Judy Garland musical, Easter Parade.

The Way Back

Genre: Drama/Adventure

Director: Peter Weir

Stars: Jim Sturgess, Ed Harris and Colin Farrell

It's World War II, it's winter at a Siberian prison, and Mother Nature carries a bigger whip than any Stalin stooge. That's the rough outline of what Peter Weir (The Truman Show) is up with The Way Back, the Aussie director's first feature in seven years. In telling the story of a 6,500-kilometre trek by Soviet prison escapees from Siberia to India, he's interested more in the physical exertion than the mental or emotional one. Despite a strong cast we never really get to know any of the sloggers. We do, though, feel every footstep across the ice, snow and sand, doggedly retracing a route from Siberia through the Gobi Desert and the Himalayas to India. As a director Weir is definitely old school, with no desire whatsoever to turn isolation into art. He is least certain when depicting the interior struggle that these men face, leaving it to us to infer most of it. What more motivation or nuance does one need, you might ask, than simply a quest for freedom? It's a good point, one that you'll have ample time to reflect on during The Way Back's 133-minute running time.

● PETER HOWELL

Daydream Nation

Genre: Drama/Romance

Director: Michael Goldbach

Stars: Kat Dennings, Reece Thompson and Josh Lucas

Like the trippy 1988 Sonic Youth album that informs its title and mood, Daydream Nation is caught between generations and lost in time and space.

Writer/director Mike Goldbach conjures a claustrophobic small town where teens and adults share sex and angst, a serial killer lazily stalks his prey and a stoner's haze blends with the smoke of a perpetual industrial fire. Caught halfway between comedy and drama, it's a movie that resists definition. The lead character tells us the film will detail "the year that nearly everything happened to me." Goldbach takes this to heart, packing Daydream Nation with enough characters and incidents to fuel three movies. But he's also brave enough, and inventive enough, to give us an unlikeable protagonist and to make the serial-killer angle a subplot rather than the main concern. ● PETER HOWELL

Cool, colourful San Fran

► Alex Charlow was born in North California and works, surfs and promotes his band (Agent 126) in San Francisco ► In the last five years he's moved around and experienced cuisine and nightlife in different neighbourhoods.

San Francisco is an interesting place with extraordinary traditions and a cosmopolitan lifestyle. I like the energy. I love exploring each neighborhood and celebrating it's diversity. No matter what you're into, San Francisco has it. Want to spend your evenings with wine fanatics, sipping every wine from Sonoma and Napa County?

We've got the perfect wine bar for you. Want to kite surf in some of the best spots in the world? We've got that too. Want to see if you've got what it takes to escape from Alcatraz? We've got a swim event you might want to check out.

Want to wander the streets wearing hot pants, a sombrero, and show your appreciation for unicorns? We've probably got a group for that too.

First time?

You can't experience San Francisco in one weekend, and attempting to do so means missing out on a lot of what makes San Francisco so special.

What you should do on your first occasion depends on when you arrive.

If you're here in May you must experience Bay to Breakers, a marathon extending from the San Francisco Bay to the Pacific Ocean. It's the city's largest celebration, with thousands of San Franciscans dressed in costume for the longest party of the year. Otherwise, nothing can compare to an afternoon of munching on crab, walking the span of the Golden Gate Bridge, sailing to Alcatraz, and watching the seals play at Pier 39, all in the morning! At night your best bet is to explore the hot spots. Each neighborhood in San Francisco has it's own unique flavour, but Russian Hill, the Marina, Haight, the Mission, and North Beach are all excellent options.

Shopping!

If you've got some cash burning a hole in your pocket, head over to Union Square, a shopping district that has every store you could imagine. If you've got the hole in your pocket, but no cash, head over to the corner of Haight and Ashbury and buy some unique vintage threads.

Eat

When it comes to wining and dining, where to go depends on what you like. I'm a seafood nut, so Pacific Catch in the Marina is my place of choice. Its Japanese fusion produces some amazing salmon rice bowls, complete with seaweed salad, avocados, sprouts, and more (pacificcatch.com). If you're near the waterfront at Embarcadero you have to experience the fresh Dungeness crab, or table up at Boudin's and enjoy a delicious fresh clam chowder in a turtle shaped bread bowl (boudinbakery.com).

► Shop til you drop.

► Alcatraz

Go out

I'm a beer guy, but if you like cocktails you have go to Lion Pub in Pac Heights. There isn't a sign, and the bar is hard to spot, but once you get in you're treated to fresh, hand-pumped greyhounds and raspberry mojitos that are unmatched. If you need a secondary spot hit up Bourbon and Branch, a prohibition era bar that maintains the 1920s vibe. When you get to the door just say "library" and you'll be whisked away behind a secret bookshelf and sipping authentic gimlets in no time (bourbonandbranch.com).

Been there before?

If you've already been and are looking for a new experience, try the night tour of Alcatraz. There is nothing spookier than wandering the dark hallways of the prison while listening to the cell bars clinking on your audio tour.

If you're afraid of the dark, catch the sunset from the outfield of AT&T Park with a Giants game, one of the most beautiful ballparks in the USA.

Finally, if you've done it all, head out to the House of Air in the Presidio and get your hop on, literally, it's a giant indoor trampoline park that features competitive dodgeball leagues on trampolines.

► Eric Ripert of New York City's Le Bernardin restaurant creates a salad of green papaya with shrimp & calamari

For Eric Ripert, a salad can be an anything goes experience — as long as it's small.

"A salad, for me, is part of a meal. I love plain green salads. Anything goes — arugula, bibb, Boston, watercress, mache," says Ripert, chef and owner of the three Michelin star Le Bernardin restaurant in New York.

Salads even can open the eyes of a young boy. "Salad nicoise made with canned tuna in olive oil ... reminds me of my childhood in Nice," he says.

Ripert offers this salad recipe he created while visiting Vietnam. It blends crunchy green papaya with shrimp and calamari, then dresses everything with mint and cilantro and a splash of lime juice and pungent fish sauce.

Preparation:

1 In a bowl, whisk lime juice, sugar, fish sauce and olive oil. Add green papaya, carrot, scallions, jalapeno, mint and cilantro; toss to coat evenly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Let salad sit and marinate for at least 5 minutes.

2 In non-stick skillet over medium-high, heat 30 ml (2 tbsp) of the canola oil. Season shrimp with salt and pepper, add to skillet and sear shrimp for 2 minutes per side. Transfer shrimp to a paper towel-lined plate.

3 Add remaining 30 ml (2 tbsp) of canola oil to skillet and return it to heat. When oil is hot, add calamari. Season with salt and pepper, toss to cook calamari until just barely opaque, about 2 minutes.

4 Add shrimp and calamari to salad; toss to coat. Divide among 4 plates and serve.

 - 3 grapefruit
 - 1 small fennel bulb (about 250 ml/1 cup), thinly sliced
 - 1/2 cucumber
 - 1 avocado
 - 1 persimmon
 - 60 ml (4 tbsp) fresh pomegranate seeds
 - 2 sprigs tarragon
 - 1 head radicchio

 - 30 ml (2 tbsp) and 5 ml (1 tsp) extra-virgin olive oil

This colourful and elegant grapefruit and shrimp salad would be the perfect dish to serve at a brunch or luncheon.

Preparation:

1 Cook the potatoes in boiling salted water until very tender. While potatoes are cooking, whisk together ingredients for vinaigrette in a medium bowl. Cut cooked potatoes into quarters and put them directly into vinaigrette while they are hot to infuse the flavour.

2 Zest 30 to 45 ml (2 to 3 tbsp) of the grapefruit peel. Then peel and segment grapefruit and place in a strainer over a bowl to save juice for searing shrimp.

3 Thinly slice the fennel and cucumber. Peel and cube avocado and persimmon. Peel seeds from pomegranate. Pluck individual tarragon leaves from stem. Tear radicchio into medium pieces. Set all ingredients aside.

4 In a hot sauté pan, sear shrimp in 15 ml (1 tbsp) olive oil. Cook the shrimp for 1 or 2 minutes on each side. Add the grapefruit zest and reserved juice to the pan. Combine the shrimp and remaining salad ingredients together, toss.

Just how effective is sex education in school?

► Open communication always the way to go when it comes to 'the talk'

Most research on sex education targets teenagers, a group that wants and needs accurate, complete and unbiased information about sex, given that a significant proportion of adolescents engage in sexual activity. In 2005, 43 per cent of Canadian teens aged 15 to 19 reported that they had had sexual intercourse at least once. Eight per cent of teens reported having had sexual intercourse before they were 15 years old.

The effectiveness of most sexual health interventions is not evaluated. The research also has relatively weak research designs, such as poor use of control groups. However, here are some conclusions:

- Adolescents who receive comprehensive sex education have a lower risk of pregnancy than those who receive abstinence-only or no sex education. Comprehensive sex education includes information on birth control and on prevention of sexually transmitted diseases as well as abstinence messages.

Web Awareness

For a great online resource on sex education, as well as the research references that inform this issue, visit:

► cea-ace.ca/facts-on-education

► In a 2005 study, 43 per cent of Canadian teens aged 15 to 19 reported that they had had sex at least once.

- Programs that focus on abstinence without discussing safer sex behaviours do not seem to reduce HIV risk. Some abstinence-only programs can decrease teens' sexual behaviours, although the effects are modest and short term.

- Sex education programs often ignore the subject of non-heterosexual orientations (i.e. homosexual, bisexual, transgendered).

- Many students with disabilities receive poor sex education services or may be excluded entirely.

- Studies have found that self-esteem and adolescent's sexual behaviour and attitudes are not related, so self-esteem should not be the main focus of sex education.

- Using peers to deliver sexual health education to young people does not seem to increase condom use or reduce the odds of pregnancy or of having more partners.

Parents can support their children at home through open discussion of information about sex, and by reinforcing messages about condom use and other forms of birth control as well as around the risks of — and social pressures related to — sexual behaviour.

Role-playing hypothetical situations can be a useful strategy.

If the child is not comfortable talking to his or her parents or vice versa, finding someone the child can talk openly with would be a good alternative.

Following the positive feedback I received from last week's column, here are some more do's and don'ts for the workplace.

Do not assume that post-employment restrictions on competition will always be invalid. Many non-compete clauses are now being upheld with alarming regularity, despite the scope of the restriction.

Do not expect employers to pay for your stress leave. While they have an obligation to accommodate sicknesses, you must first demonstrate that you are actually sick. If your claim is dubious, you can be ordered to see a doctor to confirm that you are genuinely disabled from performing your job. The fact you are stressed will not always amount to a "disability."

Do tell the truth if your behaviour is being investigated by your employer and make sure that you do not deny the obvious. Often the reasons you are being investigated do not merit discipline or cause for dismissal but lying during the investigation does. If you have something to hide, you are better off admitting it and then providing an explanation.

STUDENT VOICE

TALENTEGG.CA

When I was in Carleton University's journalism program, I didn't really understand how difficult it would be to get a job when I got out of school, and I certainly didn't understand the value of networking and how much it mattered to career success.

I was attending school in Ottawa while living in Toronto during the summers, so it was difficult for me to find relevant summer positions in my field. This resulted in a string of fun summer jobs, none of which had anything to do with my goal of securing a job in public relations, journalism or communications upon graduation.

Luckily, my mom worked in public relations and she was able to set up some informational interviews for me during my

Where Erin is now

I'm now working as the community manager at Sprouter.com, a small technology startup focused on providing expert answers to entrepreneurship questions. I handle all of the communications, PR, marketing, social media strategy, events, and a whole whack of other stuff. It's been an amazing experience. I advise any new graduates to get a job at a small company. You'll get so much experience, and you really get a sense of accomplishment.

▶ Erin Bury advises recent graduates to gravitate toward smaller companies if they're hoping for big responsibilities.

fourth year reading week.

This was the best thing I could have done, as it got my name out there and gave me a feel for what life at a PR agency was like.

One of the interviews I had, at Environics Communications, resulted in my first post-grad full-time position. But that wasn't until October and I graduated in April.

Those few months in between were really difficult. I applied for jobs constantly on sites like Workopolis, but it was like sending your resumé into an abyss.

I didn't have a good network in place, so I often relied on family contacts to get me in the door. While I appreciate the help my mom gave me, I hated that I was getting interviews based on nepotism.

Now I realize that most people land jobs based on referrals and that you have to take help whenever it's offered to you. While my contacts may have gotten me in the door, it was my smarts and ambition that got me the job.

I'm thankful that I got a full-time job shortly after graduation, but it certainly wouldn't have happened like it did without some pre-graduation networking, and introductions from trusted contacts.

What I learned

Key take-aways from Erin's experience:

- ▶ Don't wait until your last year to get work experience in your field. Start as early as possible – even in first year. The experience will look great on your resumé and, more importantly, you'll meet many people who might hire you after graduation.
- ▶ Ask people in your network to help you find a job – even your mom. Although there's a negative stigma surrounding so-called nepotism, it's one of the most effective ways to find work.

Sound advice for SMBs

BOOK REVIEW

CRAIG LUND

LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

In North America, the bulk of the business world is not comprised of mega corporations but rather the compilation of hundreds of thousands of small and medium businesses (SMBs). Many of these businesses start out as the dream of a single entrepreneur, but in most cases these businesses are not necessarily built with an intent to be sold. According to author and entrepreneur John Warrillow, this is not a smart practice as it does not allow the owner an exit strategy. In his book Built to Sell, Warrillow explains that "a business reliant on its owner is unsellable, so the owner er becomes trapped in the business". Sadly that often means the business gets sold for pennies to the dollar, shut down and disbanded or simply bankrupted.

There are many reasons why a business owner will want to sell. They could be approaching retirement age, lost interest in the business, or become burnt out running a shop with high capital costs and low returns. Warrillow explains that when it comes to selling, most business owners assume that they will find a buyer who will pay an upfront buyout based on a simple multiple of the company's earnings before tax. The reality, and this is especially true for service based companies, is that "the owners typically get some money upfront and the rest of the money is contingent on hitting performance goals in the years ahead." This scenario is referred to as an earn out and often requires a 3-5 year commitment of the owner after the sale.

Using storytelling to explain the process, Warrillow also includes a practical 8 step implementation guide to help a business owner 'fix' the business so that it can be built.

Warning – read before operating, some good advice for those starting a business and first aid for those looking to sell.

As spring thaws out Canada and floods the land with warm sunshine, office drones may feel the glory days are passing them by. You could set up a webcam and live stream the sunshine to your computer, or you could take expert advice and make the most of your breaks.

Stan Murray, director of healthy workplace at Canada's National Quality Institute, says workers may feel pressure from their bosses to not take breaks, or guilt for leaving the office. But the good outweighs any bad for everyone, he says.

"If you're taking your breaks, you're doing all sorts of wonderful things for yourself. You're releasing tension, you're reducing stress, helping ease symptoms of depression and anxiety, lowering your blood pressure and helping to prevent headaches from eye strain," he says.

The benefits are increased if you take an active break and get your heart rate up. Use your lunch hour to hit the gym and if you need an extra 10 minutes, tell your boss. Your increased energy when you get back will quickly make up for it, Murray says.

"Senior leaders are role models and should set examples by taking lunch breaks and not encroaching on personal time," he adds.

Judith Down, director of the Alberta Centre for Active Living at the University of Alberta, says too many workers spend too much time sitting at their desk.

When you need to speak with a colleague, she says to invite them on a "walking meeting."

"Instead of sitting in one place, you go for a walk with the person you want to meet with, either outdoors or indoors. That way you're getting your business done and getting some exercise," Down says. "You can get a bit bogged down if you don't take a break."

Seguin leads the way as Bruins even up series

► Rookie breaks out as Boston snaps Tampa Bay's eight-game win streak

Tyler Seguin had two goals and two assists as the Boston Bruins fed off the energy of the recently promoted rookie to beat the Tampa Bay Lightning 6-5 and tie the Eastern Conference final 1-1 last night.

Boston earned a split at home and has now won nine of its last 11 games.

The 19-year-old Seguin, the second pick in last year's draft, was benched for the first 11 playoff games because of perceived defensive shortcomings. He rejoined the lineup for the series opener, getting a goal and an assist, when Patrice Bergeron sat out because of a mild concussion.

Last night, with Bergeron still sidelined, Seguin tied it at 2-2 just 48 seconds into the second period then made it 4-2 at 6:30. Vincent Lecavalier cut the Lightning's deficit to 4-3 with a power-play goal at 7:48, but Seguin set up two goals by Michael Ryder that put Boston on top 6-3 entering the third.

Steven Stamkos and Dominic Moore scored in the final period for the Lightning.

Adam Hall gave the Lightning a 1-0 lead 13 seconds after the opening faceoff, the quickest goal in the team's playoff history.

Nathan Horton tied Game 2 with a power-play goal at 13:58, but the Lightning took a 2-1 lead when Martin St. Louis scored with seven seconds left in the first period.

The Bruins came out aggressively in the second period and scored five goals.

Seguin started the barrage when he took a pass from Ryder at his blue-line and used exceptional speed to race between defencemen Randy Jones and Victor Hedman. He went in alone on Dwayne Roloson, cut from right to left, and lifted a backhand over the sprawling goalie.

David Krejci put the Bruins ahead for good at 2:24 with the only Bruins goal of the second period that didn't involve Seguin.

Seguin connected again at 6:30. Skating in on the right, he called for the puck. Horton passed from the left, and Seguin put in a 10-footer to the left of Roloson. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cavs win top pick in NBA draft lottery

Represented by 14-year-old Nick Gilbert, the son of owner Dan Gilbert, the Cavaliers won the lottery

The Cavs will have two top-four picks for a chance at a quick rebuild.

Minnesota will pick second and Utah turned New

Lumsden chooses sled over gridiron

Jesse Lumsden decided one foot in bobsled and the other in the Canadian Football League won't allow him to step onto the podium at the 2014 Winter Olympics.

The 28-year-old Canadian running back confirmed yesterday he'd closed the door on his football career to concentrate on moving from the back of the bobsled to the front.

Once considered Canada's best running back when healthy, Lumsden wants to become the country's top bobsled pilot and win a gold medal in 2014.

He was a brakeman for Pierre Lueders at the 2010 Winter Games, finishing fifth in the two-man event and seventh in the four-man race.

"I realized how technical the sport is, how precise it is and how good you have to be to be fast," Lumsden said during a news conference at Canada Olympic Park in Calgary. "That's the goal. It's not to get down the hill anymore. It's to be fast."

"When I realized that, I realized I had to put my heart and soul into the endeavour. I don't want to just place and just get by. For me to be No. 1 in the world, it's going to require my full attention."

The six-foot-three, 228-pound Edmonton native won the 2004 Hec Crighton Trophy with McMaster as the top player in Canadian university football. He was drafted by the Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

But his pro career was star-crossed with injuries.

Lumsden had 1,842 rushing yards — most of them in four seasons with Hamilton — and 10 touchdowns during his CFL career.

Clowe says it's time for Sharks to get physical Ryane Clowe vows the Vancouver Canucks won't get off as easy in Game 2 of the Western Conference final.

The rugged forward says Canucks defencemen can expect to be pounded into the end boards while retrieving pucks from now on.

That didn't happen enough in Vancouver's 3-2 victory in Game 1 and Clowe, a six-foot-two, 220-pound left-winger, intends to do something about it tonight.

"We've obviously got big forwards and (delivering hits) is definitely a part of my game," said Clowe.

Yet the Fermeuse, N.L., native has hands soft enough to generate four goals and 13 points this post-season to tie Joe Thornton for the team lead.

"Last game it was just one of those games where it was tough to get ... rhythm or momentum going," Clowe said.

"That comes off a lot of things but a lot of it has to do with wearing them down. That's a big part of my game and we've got a lot of forwards 220-plus."

Back end steps up for Canucks

▶ 'From Day 1 this year (defence-men) have been the backbone of our team,' says captain Henrik Sedin

A puck-savvy, fluid defence is one of the reasons why the Vancouver Canucks scored more goals than any other team in the regular season.

The Canucks offensive engine is fuelled by a group of mobile defencemen who can move the puck quickly and are not afraid to jump into the play when given the chance.

"They move the puck well. You need your defence to help you offensively," captain Henrik Sedin said yesterday after practice. "They're going to be the guys to make the first pass. They're going to join the rush. If you don't have that, it's tough to score in this league."

Putting a road block in front of Vancouver's defencemen is something the San Jose Sharks will need to do when they face the Canucks in Game 2 of the Western Conference final tonight. The Sharks lost Sunday's opening game 3-2.

Vancouver defenceman Kevin Bieksa tied that game in the third period on a pass from Alex Burrows.

"Offence from our defence has been a big part of our team's success all year," said Bieksa, who has two goals and three assists in the playoffs. "It's just a matter of reading when the right time is."

The top gun on the Canucks defence is Christian Ehrhoff, who fed Henrik Sedin for the winning goal Sunday.

Ehrhoff has two goals and eight assists for 10 points in the playoffs, second in scoring among defencemen behind San Jose's Dan Boyle, who has 12 points (two goals, 10 assists).

Vancouver's defence helped the Canucks earn a league-leading 262 goals and allow the least with 241 over the regular season.

Thunder can't stop Nowitzki

Dirk Nowitzki showed no rust from a long layoff, making 10 of his first 11 shots and an NBA playoff-record 24 straight free throws on the way to 48 points, leading the Dallas Mavericks to a 121-112 victory over the Oklahoma City Thunder in Game 1 of the Western Conference final last night.

Hall of Fame slugger
Killebrew dies at 74

► Twins legend was battling esophageal cancer

Harmon Killebrew, the affable, big-swinging Hall of Famer whose tape-measure home runs made him the cornerstone of the Minnesota Twins and perhaps the most popular player in the team's 51-year history, died yesterday after battling esophageal cancer. He was 74.

The Twins said Killebrew passed away peacefully at his home in Scottsdale, Ariz., with his wife, Nita, and their family at his side. He announced his diagnosis just six months ago, and last week Killebrew said he was settling in for the final days of his life after doctors deemed the "awful disease" incurable.

Killebrew is 11th on baseball's all-time home run list after an exceptional 22-year career. His eight seasons with 40 or more homers still is tied for second in league history to Babe Ruth, and his upper-cut swing formed the silhouette that inspired Major League Baseball's official logo.

At Target Field, where the video board showed a picture of Killebrew, members of the Twins ground crew slowly lifted home plate and slipped under it a plastic-encased, black-and-white photo of Killebrew winding up for a swing. The picture, believed to be from the 1960s, will stay beneath the plate the rest of the season.

Twins catcher Joe Mauer said he felt like he had lost a family member.

"He has treated me like one of his own," Mauer said in a statement issued by the team. "It's hard to put into words what Harmon has meant to me. He first welcomed me into the Twins family as an 18-year-old kid and has continued to influence my life in many ways. He is someone I will never forget and will always treasure the time we spent together." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Engine

The Veloster's 138-horsepower 1.6-litre engine has the same output as the previous Elantra's 1.8-litre engine, however numerous technological improvements have enabled many automakers, including Hyundai, to reduce engine displacement to improve fuel economy without losing any power.

Interior

The interior provides seating for four passengers and has easy-to-read gauges and control-panel knobs for the driver.

In terms of optional features, there is an upgraded interior, push-button start, up-level 450-watt sound package, navigation system, panoramic sunroof and 18-inch alloy wheels (17-inch alloys are standard).

Rear door

The key design element of the Veloster is the well-camouflaged full-sized front-hinged rear door.

It differs from other rear-hinged openings (such as those found on the Mazda RX-8 or the retired Saturn coupe) in that it can be accessed from the outside or inside and doesn't require the front passenger door to be unlatched first.

The Veloster: Hyundai's next game-changer

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

There's something rather odd going on at Hyundai these days. It's name is Veloster and it has three different-sized passenger doors.

Yes, the 2012 Veloster is an oddity.

The lack of portal symmetry certainly sets it apart from virtually anything else on the road, which is exactly what Hyundai's designers have been striving for lately. When you consider how dramatically different the latest Sonata and Elantra sedans appear from their respective mainstream peers, it was almost a forgone conclusion that shredding the styling envelope would continue.

The Veloster, available late this summer, is the slow-to-arrive replacement for the Tiburon sport coupe that was phased out following the 2008 model year.

Hyundai always planned to replace its entry-level "shark" (that's what Tiburon means in Spanish), but it first focused on launching the upstart Genesis coupe that runs in the same rear-wheel-drive class as the Ford Mustang, Chevy Camaro and Dodge Challenger, but without the V8 option, of course.

By comparison, the front-wheel-drive Veloster plays in a different sandbox where affordability and fuel economy are as important as eye-catching styling.

In all three areas, the Veloster could become a serious category crusher.

The Veloster will likely become another game-changing model for Hyundai. Count this as yet another groundbreaking design in the company's recent automotive arsenal.

HONDA'S ASIMO ROBOT IS HIGH TECH ... AND CUTE

@METRONWS.CA

Honda designs and builds a lot of vehicles. Honda has also developed ASIMO, one of the world's most advanced humanoid robots.

At first blush it doesn't seem like the two enterprises have much in common. Like Tim Hortons having a division that builds canoes.

But according to Honda, the thing that binds cars and trucks, motorcycles, the new HondaJet, and humanoid robots all together is that they all contribute to human "mobility."

ASIMO is designed to be a helper to people who have limited mobility, such as those confined to wheelchairs and beds.

I know what you're thinking — can ASIMO help me if I'm just lazy? I don't see why not. Like, how's it going to know?

I had a chance to see ASIMO last week, at its visit to the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto, where it performed to an appreciative audience of young students.

Or maybe the students were just happy to get the day off from school.

Either way, they applauded and cheered when ASIMO responded to questions from his handler, kicked a soccer ball, stood on one leg, walked up and down a flight of steps and ran across the stage.

Very impressive indeed.

► Standing at four-feet, three inches tall, Honda's ASIMO robot weighs 119 pounds.

After the "performance," ASIMO was joined on stage by Eric Wedin, project leader of the ASIMO team, to take some questions from the students, and one of the first questions went right to the heart of the matter: "How much money has Honda spent on ASIMO?"

"ASIMO is a priceless piece of R&D technology," was Wedin's practiced reply.

Other questions were, in turn, insightful and slightly off the wall. I preferred those in the latter group, like ... "Can ASIMO swim?" ... "Can ASIMO travel on rough ground?" ... "Could you put a jet-pack on ASIMO?"

The subtext of this line of questioning seemed, to me at least, that the youngsters had no pressing need for ASIMO's help around the kitchen, but would love to pal around with a mini Ironman that would give you some 'cred around the neighbourhood. Why make a robot if it can't shoot lasers?

Later, I asked Wedin to expound on the decision to make ASIMO so cute.

He said cuteness and a small scale (just over four feet) were definite design criteria, considering its "people helper" role.

At that height it can relate better at eye-level to immobilized individuals. Makes sense... Who wants a seven-foot robot bringing you some porridge?

Robots don't have to be humanoid. In fact, they might be more useful and capable if they took on some other form.

According to Wedin, ASIMO is humanoid because of the comfort factor and because it needs to operate in environments that have been optimized for humanoids — like homes, schools and hospitals.

The human form obviously works too, so it's not the worst one to research — even if your business model is currently based on wheeled devices.

If it bubbles like an Aero bar, that's OK

DRIVING FORCE

JILL MCINTOSH
DRIVE@METRONWS.CA

There's an old saying in horse racing, "Weight will stop a freight train."

It refers to the fact that, in certain races, faster horses will have weights put in their saddles to even out the field.

Similarly, weight is an issue in cars, where more fuel is needed to move around any excess flab.

Making components lighter is now a priority with automakers, including Ford, which will be using its MuCell technology in the future to reduce the weight of certain plastic parts.

These don't look any different from solid plastic parts on the outside, but if you were to cut one in half, you'd see that the plastic is filled with millions of tiny bubbles, just like an Aero chocolate bar.

The technology was initially developed by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the late 1980s, but Ford says it has not yet been used in the automotive industry.

"Basically what we do is take a gas such as nitrogen, and we mix it with the molten plastic when we're ready to injection-mould," says Ellen Lee, a technical expert in plastics research at Ford.

"When you mould the part and it solidifies, it has millions of uniform bubbles, so that we can reduce the amount of material we use and reduce the weight."

MuCell can only be used in thermal plastic, the type that is melted and then formed by injection moulding or extrusion.

This type of plastic always shrinks when it hardens, but Lee says that the MuCell product shrinks more uniformly, fills the mould quickly and evenly, and requires less time to produce parts.

► This photo illustrates the bubbles that are inside the plastic of Ford's MuCell technology.

Welcome to the Light Club

► The first rule of Light Club is that every gram counts ... the second rule of Light Club is that every gram counts

JOE KNYCHA
WHEELBASE MEDIA
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

Three words — every gram counts — frame the engineering mindset at Audi these days as it delves into the science of lightweight construction and its effects on vehicle safety, performance, efficiency and emissions.

But simple words don't always translate into easy action.

Achieving lightness has become incredibly complex business.

In addition to reducing the weight of individual components and systems, carbon-fibre-reinforced plastics (CFRPs) are joining aluminum and ultra-high-strength steels to make vehicle bodies that are not just lighter, but almost indestructible.

CFRPs and exotic resins are layered, molded, pressed, formed and baked in giant ovens into components that are stronger than steel but weigh almost half as much.

The new plastics do not lend themselves easily to

The body of Audi's newest A8 limousine is 40 per cent lighter, and considerably stronger, than if it were made of steel.

mass production and working with carbon fibre has traditionally been both time — and labour-intensive.

But Audi says it has made breakthroughs in dealing with the new-age plastics.

A lighter body is the starting point for weight reductions on other parts of the car as engineers work to shave "every possible gram" (without compromising durability or function) from the drivetrain, suspension, passenger compartment, electrical system and the electronics.

Lightweight construction is a "strategic" policy that Audi's competitors are only now beginning to adopt, said Alois Feldschmid, head of total vehicle development.

"A lighter car accelerates, brakes and corners better and has sustainable economic and ecological results."

In an industry where the rule has been that vehicles get bigger and heavier over time, Audi is attempting "reversing the weight spiral."

The company has developed "competence" over the past 30 years in the use of combined materials, said Feldschmid.

It has incorporated carbon fibre into its cars since first using it for body parts on the original 1980 Audi Quattro.

Different materials with different strengths require new technologies to join them, not only in metal-on-metal applications, but also metal-on-plastic, said Dr. Klaus Koglin, head of technical development.

Lambo lightness

► In Sant'Agata Bolognese, Italy, Audi subsidiary Lamborghini — the maker of exotic sports cars — has incorporated into its new flagship Aventador LP700-4, for the first time in any series production road vehicle, a full monocoque body structure made entirely from carbon fibre.

► Rather than a body that sits on a separate frame, a monocoque design uses the body as the frame structure.

► In a process that is still labour intensive and expensive, Lamborghini has taken the time required to complete a full body-in-white (the unpainted vehicle's basic body structure, including sheet metal but minus bolt-on components, like doors) to just over 120 hours from several weeks.

► The entire "shell" weighs just 147 kilograms yet is so rigid that any bending or twisting of the structure under conditions of extreme loading is virtually non-existent and undetectable by humans.

► Stiffness is crucial for safety as well as providing a platform for razor-sharp handling where the suspension does not have to compensate for a flimsy chassis.

► Carbon fibre begins as a pliable product with the resin built right in. It's formed into a mold, by hand, put into a plastic bag and all the air is drawn out. It's perfectly suited to the low-volume, high-performance requirements of an ultra-expensive sports car such as the Lamborghini Aventador.

► The Lamborghini Aventador LP700-4's entire carbon-fibre body shell (above) weighs 147 kilograms. Below is a shot of the finished product.

Twins: Platform-sharing pleasures

► Avenger/Sebring look reliable, but may suffer from driveline electronics problems

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

Platform sharing brought the Chrysler Sebring and Dodge Avenger into 2007 and 2008, respectively, on a new platform while offering new styling, engines and features.

These corporate twins from Chrysler were offered in a sedan model, while the Sebring could be had as an affordable convertible.

Power came from a 2.4-litre four-cylinder engine with 172 horsepower, or a 3.5-litre V6 with 235. Look for four or six-speed automatic transmissions.

All models were front-wheel drive, though All Wheel Drive (AWD) could be specified on certain models in certain years.

Look for features like automatic climate control, heated leather seats, a sunroof, premium audio by Boston Acoustics, navigation, Bluetooth and sexy LED interior lighting.

Consider either the Sebring or Avenger as an alternative to models like the Honda Accord, Toyota Camry, Ford Fusion or Chevrolet Malibu.

Common issues to be aware of

Among the most common problems reported with this generation of Sebring

What's the 4-1-1

- Models: Dodge Avenger and Chrysler Sebring
- Vehicle Type: Sedan/Convertible

and Avenger were related to electronics. Stalling, sporadic power delivery and even transmission drivability issues could all be electronics related — so be sure to ask the seller if they've ever experienced such problems and whether or not they've been rectified.

Some owners say the stalling issue is more prevalent in cold or damp weather and at low speeds.
